GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY: A BRIEF HISTORY

CONGRATULATIONS, VENERABLE MOTHER . . . ! You alone, among all the colleges, have lived as long as the republic.” That inscription, in Latin, greeting the visitors to the celebration of the completion of Georgetown’s first century in 1889, reminded them of the University’s unique origin as an American Catholic institution of higher learning.

Two seemingly unrelated events created the conditions for this establishment of the first Catholic college in the United States: the Suppression of the Society of Jesus and the American Revolution. When Pope Clement XIV under pressure from the courts of Europe suppressed the Jesuit order in 1773, the Reverend John Carroll, a Marylander who had entered the Society in Europe in 1753 and remained there to teach in Jesuit colleges, returned home in 1774. Had the Society not been suppressed, it is highly unlikely that Carroll would ever have seen America again. A year later he became a staunch supporter of the revolution against England. For Catholics the revolution meant the opportunity to free themselves from the civil disabilities that had plagued them and other minorities in most colonies, including Maryland. With independence Catholics were now able, at least theoretically, to vote, hold office, worship publicly, and educate their children in their own schools.

John Carroll founded Georgetown in 1789, making it the oldest Catholic and Jesuit institution of higher learning in the United States.

No one saw more clearly the needs and possibilities for the education of the Catholic community in the young republic than did Carroll, whom Rome appointed as first head of the American Church in 1784. Carroll wanted to take full advantage of the unprecedented freedom given to the Church in the United States to establish a school in the liberal arts tradition that had so distinguished Jesuit education for more than two hundred years. He wanted his academy to be “the mainsheet anchor” of American Catholics, an institution that could uniquely “give consistency to our religious views in this country,” by fostering an education that would combine the best of the Catholic and republican cultures. Under Bishop Carroll’s leadership, ex-Jesuits established Georgetown in the late 1780s. In 1789 he secured the deed to some 60 acres of ground on a hill overlooking the village of Georgetown, a thriving tobacco port in Maryland. A few months before the academy opened in January of 1792, the bishop learned that the capital would be established in the neighborhood. It “gives a weight to our establishment,” he noted, “which I little thought of when I recommended that situation.”

Lack of resources – money, faculty, students – severely crippled the College during its first two decades. With the partial restoration of the Society of Jesus in 1805, the order was given the direction of the institution. For the next forty years European Jesuits constituted a substantial portion of the faculty and were responsible for the significant contributions that Georgetown made in the sciences in the second half of the century, most notably in astronomy. A year after the complete restoration of the order in 1814, the College secured its first charter from the United States government.

In accordance with Carroll’s determination that his academy be no Catholic ghetto but “open to Students of every religious Profession,” nearly a fifth of the students during the first 10 years were Protestants. By the 1830s Jews were attending the College. Throughout the nineteenth century religious pluralism characterized Georgetown’s student population.

From the beginning Georgetown was a national, indeed international, school. Its proximity to Washington with its diplomatic community was obviously a major reason for its cosmopolitan character but not an exclusive one (in the 1790s, for instance, nearly 20 percent of the students came from the West Indies). Its faculty was as diverse in origin as its students, not only Jesuit emigrés from Poland, Italy, Germany, and Belgium, but Sulpician refugees from France between 1791 and 1815.

By and large, however, Georgetown was a southern college in the antebellum period. Enslaved persons labored on Jesuit-owned plantations in Maryland, in the local neighborhood, and on the Georgetown College campus. Of its alumni who served in the Civil War, more than four-fifths were Confederates. The war nearly closed the College. The student body fell from 313 in 1859 to 17 in the fall of 1861. Federal troops briefly occupied the campus in the first month of the war. In the fall of 1862 several of the college buildings were turned into a hospital for four months after the Second Battle of Bull Run (Manassas).

In the postwar decades the College increasingly became more northern and Catholic, but the majority of students continued to range between the ages of 10 and 16. By 1871 Georgetown comprised not only the college on the hilltop but two professional schools of medicine and law in the city, founded by local doctors and lawyers in 1849 and 1870 respectively. Two presidents in the last three decades of the century attempted to convert these loosely connected schools into a university. Reverend Patrick Healy, S.J., the son of a Georgia planter and his common-law slave wife, as prefect of studies (1868–1878) and president (1873–1881) reformed the College's curriculum, with a new emphasis on history and the natural sciences. To provide adequate library, classroom, laboratory, and residential facilities he constructed the magnificent Flemish Renaissance structure that now bears his name. At the professional level he oversaw the lengthening of the programs in both medical and legal education from two to three years. In 1880 he founded the Alumni Association.

Under the leadership of Reverend Patrick Healy, S.J., who served as president from 1873 to 1881, Georgetown revitalized its curriculum and expanded its facilities dramatically with the addition of the building that bears his name today.

Reverend Joseph Havens Richards, S.J., the son of an Episcopal priest, continued Healy's efforts during his decade-long presidency (1888–1898). Richards began graduate courses in the arts and sciences, built new facilities for the law and medical schools, including a hospital, and thwarted efforts to transfer the professional schools to the new Catholic University of America. During these years Georgetown began to establish a national reputation in baseball and football.

Expansion at the professional level continued into the new century. The Washington Dental College was acquired in 1901. Three years later the Nursing School was founded to provide support for the University Hospital. By 1914 the total University population was 1378, of whom 912 were in the law school, one of the nation's largest, and exclusively a night school until 1921. (A college degree was not yet required to study law.) Dr. George Kober, dean from 1901 to 1927, ably led the Medical School through the period of reform that revolutionized American medicine in the early part of the century.

World War I caused a brief decline in the professional schools. On the main campus the entire student body was mobilized by law into the Students' Army Training Corps. In 1919 the Preparatory School completed its separation from the University with its relocation in suburban Maryland. That same year the School of Foreign Service was founded under the direction of Reverend Edmund Walsh, S.J.,

The Centennial Celebration

to prepare students for careers in diplomacy or international business. Within five years the enrollment reached 500.

In the 1920s University enrollment nearly doubled, with substantial increases in all schools, except law. New facilities—New North, Copley, White-Gravenor, the Medical-Dental Building – reflected the growth. The football team, a national power since 1914, peaked under coach Lou Little in the late twenties.

The Depression was a period of consolidation for Georgetown. Under the presidency of Reverend Arthur O’Leary, S.J., the Graduate School was formally organized and faculty recruited for selective programs in mathematics, the natural sciences, economics, history and government. Father O’Leary also revitalized the Alumni Association with James Ruby as first director. He was also responsible for the brief revival of intercollegiate football under Jack Hagerty in the years preceding World War II.

The second “Great War” transformed the main campus from a college to a testing center for the Army Specialized Training Center. By 1943 there were but 130 students at the Law School. The Medical School alone kept its prewar enrollment. In 1944 the Graduate School admitted women for the first time.

As in the twenties enrollment virtually doubled, as the GI Bill opened the University’s doors to many who could not have considered such an education before the war. Temporary buildings accommodated the overflow of students. Substantial numbers of lay faculty were hired, not only on the main campus but at the Medical Center where Dr. Harold Jaegers reorganized the departments and curriculum. The new hospital was opened in 1947. Under Reverend Edward Bunn, S.J., (1952–1964) the University entered the modern world of higher education with the restructuring of schools and the introduction of professional standards for faculty. Two new schools were divided from the School of Foreign Service, the School of Languages and Linguistics (1949) and the School of Business Administration (1957). The School of Continuing Studies was established in 1970.

School of Continuing Studies

The last three decades of the twentieth century were the most dynamic in Georgetown's history as the institution acquired national and international stature. The building boom was but the most visible evidence. Between 1970 and 1990 the main campus alone added a major library, five student villages, a large academic building (Bunn Intercultural Center), a field house, and a university complex with facilities for conferences, student clubs and the MBNA Career Education Center. Undergraduates began to rank in quality with the finest in the country, as the steady number of Rhodes, Marshall, and Mellon fellowships won by Georgetown students and alumni/ae over this period attested. Between 1984 and 2002 graduates of Georgetown won 18 Rhodes Scholarships, one of the top records of any institution of higher education in the nation. In a slightly longer period (1982-2006) they won thirteen Marshalls. The faculty in the several schools increasingly gained recognition among their peers in their respective professional fields. The growing stature of Georgetown's faculty was reflected in the increasing number of prestigious awards (Guggenheim and MacArthur Fellowships, NEH and NSF awards) that they earned. The Graduate School made distinct strides toward achieving distinction in certain fields in the humanities, social sciences, and sciences appropriate to the university's tradition, location, and resources. The MBA and Public Policy programs were both ranked among the top twenty in their fields by the end of the 1990s. The Medical Center continued to build upon its excellent tradition of research in cardiology, renal medicine, and other fields that it has established in the past forty years, while making major commitments to newer fields, most notably cancer research with the establishment of the Lombardi Center in the 1970s and biomedical research. By 1995 Georgetown was receiving more than $100 million in grants for research in the latter field. In 1997 the Medical Center was the beneficiary of a $62 million private gift, the largest in the university's history, to support research. The School of Nursing, which became the School of Nursing & Health Studies, was by the mid Nineties ranked among the top 25 nursing programs in the nation. It is now two schools: the School of Nursing and the School of Health. The Law Center not only became again one of the largest schools in the country but by the end of the 1980s ranked as one of the top ten, most noted for its leadership in clinical legal education. It added three new facilities in the Edward Bennett Williams Library, the Bernard S. and Sarah M. Gewirz Student Center, and the new wing of the Bernard P. McDonough Hall for offices and classrooms.

The improvement of the university's libraries was, beginning in the late Seventies, made a top priority. Over the course of the next quarter century, the main campus libraries more than doubled their holdings, to about two million volumes; Lauinger's Special Collections became notable for its development of collections in Jesuit, Catholic, and political history. By the mid-nineties the law library ranked seventh in the nation. Significantly during this period Georgetown began or housed four new centers connected with research in the field of social ethics and social policy: the Kennedy Institute of Ethics, the Woodstock Theological Center, the Center for Immigration Policy and Refugee Assistance, and the Center for Business and Public Policy. Other notable developments in Georgetown's strength in regional studies were the inauguration of the Center for Contemporary Arab Studies in the early 1970s; and institution of the Center for Australian and New Zealand Studies as well as that of the Center for Russian and East European Studies in the late 1990s.

Strong administrative leadership in those decades developed the institution's academic and financial strengths. Reverend Timothy Healy, S.J., (1976-1989) gave the university an unprecedentedly national voice as he became one of the influential leaders in higher education by articulating its ideals and challenges, as well as defining the unique Catholic and Jesuit traditions that inform Georgetown. He personally led the university in becoming more diverse in its student body and faculty. By 1989 minorities accounted for over 20 per cent of Georgetown's students. He also was instrumental in the quintupling of the institution's endowment. Healy's successor, Reverend Leo O'Donovan, S.J., (1989-2001) continued that remarkable growth pattern by launching the Third Century Campaign to raise a billion dollars for the university's capital needs and development. O'Donovan was also responsible for the appointment of a significant number of women to major administrative positions within the university, including the provost of the university, executive vice-president of the Law Center, dean of the College, treasurer, and general counsel. Women also greatly increased their numbers within the faculty during the nineties, a trend that had begun under Healy. By 2001 women constituted nearly 40 percent of the faculty across the university. Under both Healy and O'Donovan there was a significant increase in faculty positions and a sharp rise in the number of endowed chairs, in an era of general faculty retrenchment in higher education. By 2001 there were 63 endowed chairs on the Main Campus alone. Three new major research/teaching centers were launched in the period: the BMW Center for German and European Studies, the Center for Muslim-Christian Understanding, and the Center for New Designs in Learning and Scholarship. O'Donovan also oversaw the restructuring of the Medical Center and the separation of the hospital from the medical school.

In 2001 John J. DeGioia, Ph.D. became Georgetown's 48th president, its first lay leader. Under his leadership the University surpassed its billion dollar goal for its Third Century Campaign. A major new housing and dining complex for undergraduates and the Jesuit community – the Southwest Quadrangle – opened in the fall of 2003. Two years later, the Royden B. Davis, S.J. Center for the Performing Arts was dedicated. A $30 million donation from the McDonough family to the Business School in 1998 enabled the school, now the Robert Emmett McDonough School of Business, to begin plans for the construction of a new home between the Leavey Center and Harbin Field. At the Law Center the Eric E. Hotung International Law Center Building and a sport and fitness center completed the enlargement of that campus in 2004. The following year the School of Foreign Service opened the BSFS program in Qatar, part of the school's goal of becoming an international presence in the Middle East. In 2009 the School of Foreign Service held its first commencement in Doha, Qatar, producing the first graduates from the University's Middle East initiative. In Fall 2010, the School of Foreign Service in Qatar moved into its new home on the campus of Education City. The University's long standing commitment to science education and research, which dates from its earliest days, was confirmed in 2012 with the opening of Regents Hall, which provides a comprehensive research and teaching center for the sciences including support for innovative education and interdisciplinary research. This Georgetown science milestone was achieved in large part due to the generosity of the University's Board of Regents. In 2013, as a result of a transformative gift from alumnus Frank McCourt, the Georgetown Public Policy Institute became the McCourt School of Public Policy. In 2017, Georgetown renamed two buildings as part of its efforts to recognize and acknowledge its ties to slavery. Isaac Hawkins Hall was named for one of the 272 enslaved persons sold by the Maryland Province of the Jesuits in 1838 for the benefit of the University. Anne Marie Becraft Hall is named for the 19th-century free woman of color who founded one of the first schools for black girls in Georgetown and later became one of America's first black nuns.

The University's ongoing commitment to promote social justice and ecumenism was reflected in its establishment of the center for Social Justice Research, Teaching, and Service in 2001 as well as the Berkeley Center for Religion, Peace, and World Affairs in 2006. The latter was part of Georgetown's plan to become a leader in the interdisciplinary study of religion and its role in world affairs, a goal it had already begun to pursue through its Center for Muslim-Christian Understanding, the Center for Jewish Civilization and the Catholic Studies Program.

For more than 150 years, students have participated in intercollegiate athletics on the Hilltop. A regional power during its first 100 years of competition, in 1979 Georgetown co-founded the Big East Conference and subsequently emerged as a national force in intercollegiate circles. Since then, Georgetown has sustained its longest stretch of athletic success in its history, which continues through the present day.

During this modern era, national coaching legends John Thompson Jr. (men's basketball) and Frank Gagliano (track & field/cross country) were followed by Hall of Fame coaches Kim Simons (women's lacrosse), Dave Urick (men's lacrosse) and Tony Johnson (rowing). Following in their footsteps currently are accomplished head coaches Mike Callahan (sailing), Brian Wiese (men's soccer), Dave Nolan (women's soccer), Kevin Warne (men's lacrosse), Ricky Fried (women's lacrosse) and a roster of talented up-and-coming coaches.

the past 50 years, 14 women's teams now compete for the Blue & Gray. Hoya women have captured multiple individual national titles in track & field, tennis and team championships in rowing. Throughout the 2022 year, the Department of Athletics honored the contributions of women with a special campaign of recognition entitled: Celebrating Georgetown Women in Sports.

The first two decades of the 2000's saw NCAA team championships won in women's cross country and men's soccer as well as multiple national championships in sailing. Men's basketball reached the Final Four, women's soccer advanced to the College Cup twice and women's basketball made the Elite Eight. All-America selections over this period totaled more than 500, and dozens of conference championships – both individual and team – were won by a wide diversity of Hoya student-athletes and their teams.

The early years of the modern era added the multi-purpose Yates Field House that provided an on-campus swimming & diving venue and indoor practice space for tennis and track. More recently, the John R. Thompson Jr. Intercollegiate Athletic Center, a state-of-the-art training and practice facility with a focus on the needs of the student-athlete, opened. The completion of Shaw Field (soccer) and Cooper Field (multi-sport) followed soon afterwards.

In the twenty-first century the university continued to build upon its distinctive characteristics: Jesuit and Catholic in tradition, located in the nation's capital, dedicated to academic excellence, and international in its focus and engagement. As its Mission Statement of 2000 reaffirmed: "the University was founded on the principle that serious and sustained discourse among people of different faiths, cultures, and beliefs promotes intellectual, ethical, and spiritual understanding. We embody this principle in the diversity of our students, faculty, and staff, our commitment to justice and the common good, our intellectual openness, and our international character." Georgetown, it stated, remains very much "an academic community dedicated to creating and communicating knowledge [by providing] excellent undergraduate, graduate, and professional education in the Jesuit tradition – for the glory of God and the well-being of humankind."

THE GEORGETOWN SEAL

THE GREAT SEAL OF GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY is nearly as old as the institution itself. It bears the founding date, 1789, and the Latin inscription Collegium Georgiopolitanum Ad Ripas Potomaci in Marylandia. Before the founding date of the District of Columbia, the Village of Georgetown was indeed “on the banks of the Potomac in Maryland.”

The seal bears 16 stars, which dates it between 1796 when Tennessee was admitted to the Union and 1803 when Ohio, the 17th state, was admitted. The scroll in the eagle’s mouth bears the words “Utraque Unum,” which comes from the epistle to the Ephesians. The passage from which the two words are taken tells of the oneness of Jew and Gentile in Christ.

But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace who hath made both one, . . . Now therefore ye who are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.

As is the way in universities, the two words have taken on a variety of meanings from other contexts: the accommodation of learning and faith; the gathering of the sciences and the arts; and, most movingly of all, the joining of the blue and gray after the Civil War. It is hard not to think that the original choice of this text looked also to the fit of the old faith into the new Republic, the dream of Archbishop Carroll.

In 1844, a round version of the seal was adopted, and that again was modified in 1894. That version organized the seal more tightly, left out much of its detail, and rather pompously substituted thirteen stars for the sixteen on the original. In 1977, it was voted to return to the original seal, with all its historical memories, the one that is reproduced here.

Who the artist was no one knows, but the school accounts tell us that on May 11, 1798, Georgetown received a cash gift for the engraving of the seal from Justine Douat, who had served as a nurse for Georgetown’s younger students. The artist could well have been Miss Douat, but could also have been one of the early Jesuits who served on Georgetown’s staff.

THE KLEISLEY CHALICE

THE KLEISLEY CHALICE IS A memorial for the late Robert N. Kleisley, a 1955 graduate of the School of Business Administration, a tireless alumni leader and benefactor of Georgetown University. During his lifetime, besides being a Hoya fan, he gave generously of himself to establish the alumni interviewing admissions program and he was an early supporter of Georgetown's Concentrated Care Center and the Vincent T. Lombardi Cancer Research Center. In addition, he directed in his will that a portion of his estate be donated to support scholarships for undergraduate students. Mr. Kleisley also bequeathed to Georgetown his class ring requesting that it be incorporated into a chalice for the celebration of Holy Mass. The Kleisley Chalice, standing approximately twelve inches tall, is made of highly polished hammered silver lined with gold. His class ring with its diamond and setting intact is mounted on the base of the chalice. The height of the chalice makes it especially effective in the outdoor setting of the Baccalaureate. The paten, which is also fashioned from silver lined with gold, bears the seal of the Society of Jesus. Both pieces were created by artist and master silversmith Fred Fenster during the Bicentennial year. Mr. Fenster is professor of art at the University of Wisconsin.

The Kleisley Chalice and its paten are the first of the Bicentennial sacred vessels that one day will be completed by the addition of a great flagon, smaller chalices for administering the Holy Eucharist and several ciboria to hold the consecrated bread.

THE GEORGETOWN MACE

A MACE WAS ORIGINALLY A HEAVY STAFF or club entirely of metal with a metal head, most often spiked and was used as a weapon of war. It later became a sceptre of office, resembling in shape the original weapon, which was borne before officials on ceremonial occasions. In the House of Commons to this day the mace lies upon the table before the speaker as a symbol of the authority of the House. The ancient universities at Cambridge and Oxford still carry the mace as a symbol of university authority.

The Georgetown mace, while retaining the traditional form of the weapon, is essentially cruciform. The base begins with a square and the staff develops into four distinct elements which merge and become integral with the crowning sphere of silver, a symbol for God. The symbol of the mace speaks to the flow and growth of an organic form, and also suggests human learning with its final culmination in God Himself.

Georgetown's mace is of ebony with the base, sphere and medallions of sterling and silver. The stone breaking out of the top of the sphere is azurite. The mace was commissioned by the University in 1982, and was made as a gift to Georgetown by Paul A. Cavanagh of Greenville, Rhode Island. It is borne at the head of the University's academic procession in any ceremony during which degrees are awarded, or in which the faculty appears in formal academic dress.

ACADEMIC DRESS

T

HE ACADEMIC ATTIRE OF A COLLEGE FACULTY AT ITS formal ceremonies reveals the medieval origins of the university. Up until the early eighteenth century men and women wore their rank on their backs, or on their heads or hands. Great ladies wore rings and tiaras, great lords and kings wore crowns, the rich wore heavy gold chains, and mere players like Shakespeare wore the livery of their patrons. We have not totally lost this custom considering the ubiquitous white coats of physicians and computer experts, the robes and wigs of English judges and barristers, the gowns that preachers and choir members wear, and the collars of the clergy.

The original robes worn by academics were made of heavy wool, to protect against the pervasive chill of unheated academic halls. The general rule of such regalia is the higher the degree, the gaudier the outfit. The University of Paris robes its doctorates in gold, Bologna crowns them with what look like lamp shades, and at Oxford and Cambridge doctors wear bright scarlet. The lesser degrees, those of master and bachelor, have robes that are generally black, but they too are trimmed with a colorful hood, and in England even with fur.

Doctoral gowns in America were once all black, and the only way of identifying their source was by the hood. In the twentieth century, however, various universities began to clothe their age with new glamour. Harvard and Fordham doctoral gowns are now maroon, Yale's dark blue, Columbia's are light blue, and Georgetown's are blue with gray stripes, the colors the school adopted after the Civil War.

The doctor's gown is the fullest of the three, and the most elaborate. It has long bell sleeves, and velvet panels down its front with three stripes of the same material on the sleeves. The master's gown is the only one under which a suit coat must be worn, because its long squared-off sleeves have a hole in them through which the arms protrude. The bachelor's gown is the simplest, looking very much like a choir robe, with long pointed sleeves as its distinguishing mark.

Even when the gowns are a uniform black, the hoods are all different. The longest and fullest is the doctor's hood, and the hoods for a master or a bachelor are simply smaller versions. The hood was once worn on the head, although in its modern shape it would be difficult to make a hat out of it that wouldn't remind onlookers of Salvador Dali. The inside of the hood is lined with colors to identify the institution that granted the degree. Thus at Georgetown all hoods have a lining of blue and gray. The border around the hood generally indicates the subject in which the degree was taken.

These colors around the hood have remarkable aptness and, indeed, considered together, reveal the prejudices of the academy about its various specialties. The humanities bask in the purity of white, whereas the more practical sciences show gold. Economics is ironically signified by copper, medicine by green and law by presumptuous imperial purple. The bias of the academy gives drab to business as its color. Theology processes in martyr's scarlet and philosophy in contemplative blue. More random colors can be seen in dentistry's lilac, education's light blue, engineering's orange, fine arts' brown, music's pink, public health's salmon and nursing's apricot. The hood is worn around the throat and over the shoulders, and these identifying colors can generally be spotted right under the wearer's chin.

Identifying the markings on academic birds of such high plumage is a pacifying exercise at graduation ceremonies. It can keep the kids quiet, and provide the entire family with an education in ancient symbols. It recalls the words of a distinguished newspaper editor who, when he moved from his paper's religion to its education desk, quipped that he did so because he preferred medieval institutions.

BISHOP EVELIO MENJIVAR-AYALA
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Closeness. Cercanía. Vicinanza. All human beings, no matter their tongue, cry out for closeness—closeness to the earth that nourishes us; closeness to the people who love us; closeness to the God who sustains us. To be human is to hunger for closeness. To grow in humanity, to become authentically and integrally human, demands that we let others' cries, others' hunger for closeness, draw us into deeper relationship with them. Today, Georgetown University turns its focus toward a man whose job description is, in a single word, "closeness." And the university honors him for doing that job so very well.

Though he began his ministry as a Catholic bishop just over a year ago, Evelio Menjivar-Ayala has, since his childhood, been living out the charge that Pope Francis gave to a group of new bishops in an October 2021 homily. "You will be stewards of the faith, of service, of the charity in the Church," said the Holy Father, "and for this you must be close." Indeed, as the pope observed, "Closeness is the most typical trait of God." This same conviction had a singular importance for another Jesuit as well, Saint Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus. Ignatius imagined God looking down upon the suffering of the world and deciding, "Let us work for the redemption of the human race." On this point, all religious traditions agree: God always runs to, and never flees from, or watches at a distance, the realities of our lives, as messy and as chaotic as they can be.

Bishop Menjivar's gift for closeness was forged by his experiences of distance. As a teenager, he left the violence that plagued his native El Salvador to find what every refugee before and after him has sought: freedom from danger; freedom for flourishing. Three times, circumstances beyond his control thwarted his pilgrimage to safety. First, deportation; then, abandonment by guides; finally, imprisonment. These setbacks, however, spurred the young Evelio to cultivate those core virtues of the migrant: focus and ingenuity. In other words, he learned grit. He kept going. He got closer.

Eventually, he made his way to the United States, to Los Angeles, but he spoke little English, had a level of schooling less advanced than that of his age peers, and lacked the documents he needed to live or work legally in this country. With the life he wanted so tantalizingly near, yet, practically speaking, so undeniably distant, Bishop Menjivar, once again, chose closeness. After petitioning for and receiving asylum and a work permit, he cleaved to the people who labored alongside him as a construction worker, janitor, and painter. He immersed himself in the Salvadoran and Catholic cultures in and around Washington, D.C., which became his home more than thirty years ago. He embraced tightly the God who always carried him, animated him, and beckoned him into greater friendship.

For Bishop Menjivar, that friendship ultimately brought him to the day of his ordination as a priest in 2004; to parish ministry in Germantown, Bethesda, Landover Hills, and the District of Columbia; to the work of administration in the Archdiocese of Washington; and in 2023 to the office of bishop. The motto he selected as he inaugurated his episcopal ministry—"Ibat cum illis," "he walked with them"—encapsulates in three words what requires only one. As a bishop, a priest, a Christian, and a human being, Bishop Menjivar embodies closeness. In so doing, he makes incarnate his very own words: "We cannot say that we love God if we do not love those who are closer to us....Empathy, my brothers and sisters. Empathy—putting ourselves in the shoes of others—is to realize our common humanity."

In recognition of his empathy, his walking with people, his grit, his willingness to enter into greater friendship with God and neighbor, and his encouragement of others to hear and respond in their own ways to that same invitation of friendship—that is to say, in recognition of his closeness—Georgetown University proudly bestows upon Bishop Evelio Menjivar-Ayala the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

PATRICIA POLGAR-BAILEY
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes Patricia Polgar-Bailey, a leader in our national nursing community. She is well-known for her sustaining contributions to advanced practice nursing education and also for her dedication to a life of service.

Patricia "Tish" Polgar-Bailey reflects the Jesuit spirit of docendo discimus: discere faciendo -- by teaching, we learn: learn by doing. She is one of the co-editors of the textbook "Primary care: Interprofessional Collaborative Practice," the sentinel book used for over 30 years in Advanced Practice Nursing programs across the nation. But Dr. Polgar-Bailey is not only recognized as an educator but as one who embodies the Jesuit spirit of an ethical and empathetic leader committed to lifelong learning, community engagement and a life of service.

Dr. Polgar-Bailey is a family nurse practitioner in the Charlottesville Free Clinic providing primary care and psychotherapy to members of our most vulnerable and underserved populations in the surrounding communities in Central Virginia. This free Clinic sees over 2600 patients annually, resulting in approximately 8,000 visits. She is fluent in Spanish which has allowed her to engage with the Latino populations who might otherwise not have access to care.

Like so many nurses, Dr. Polgar-Bailey began her education incrementally. She grew up in Western Europe, South America and Southeast Asia and as an undergraduate majored in economics and anthropology, in part to help better understand her observations and experiences in the world.

Since volunteering in a Vietnamese orphanage while in high school, which proved to be life-changing, Dr. Polgar-Bailey decided to become a nurse, which would provide a direct and tangible way to serve those most in need. Working as a family nurse practitioner with underserved and immigrant populations helped her appreciate the systemic issues that affect the health of individuals and populations. She returned to school to obtain her Master's Degree in Public Health in Epidemiology/Biostatistics and Environmental Health at Boston University School of Public Health.

Regardless of where she worked, Dr. Polgar-Bailey found that it was very difficult to find mental health resources for her patients, and untreated mental illness invariably affected a person's ability to manage their chronic medical problems.

In 2007, Dr. Polgar-Bailey returned to school again for a doctorate in clinical psychology in order to provide the full spectrum of health care so often needed, but rarely available for underserved and marginalized populations. In order to more adequately address people's spiritual needs, she completed a program in spiritual direction and is a graduate of the Living School at the Center of Action and Contemplation in New Mexico. She has been recognized for her research, teaching and commitment to social welfare. That commitment also extended to her involvement in foster care and adoption as well as food justice and equity. Dr. Polgar-Bailey's embodiment of Georgetown's cura personalis is evident in her lifetime of service.

In recognition of her ethical and empathetic leadership in the national nursing community, her commitment to lifelong learning, community engagement and a life of service, and her demonstration of cura personalis in action Georgetown University with admiration and esteem bestows upon Patricia Polgar-Bailey, the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

NGOZI OKONJO-IWEALA
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Fortune has ranked today's honoree as one of the Fifty Greatest World Leaders. Forbes named her one of the Hundred Most Powerful Women in the World. Time considered her one of the Top Hundred Most Influential People in the World. The U.K. Guardian agreed. No wonder that in 2003, when she became Finance Minister of Nigeria, some people began to refer to her not by her name Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala, but as Ngozi Okonjo-Wahala, "trouble woman." They got that right. In her own words, she is "a fighter," serious trouble for anyone who accepts inequality, corruption or prejudice as the inevitable status quo. From the beginning of her long and distinguished career, in her native Nigeria and on the global stage, she has been unchanging only in her resolute opposition to any and all who resist change or deny its possibility.

After earning a bachelor's degree from Harvard Magna Cum Laude with a major in Economics, she went on to MIT where she received her doctorate. She then joined the World Bank where she rose rapidly through senior positions until finally becoming a Managing Director. When she joined the Bank it tended to shy away from countries in conflict, believing that aid would not be productive there. She argued instead that countries in conflict were in conflict largely because their institutions were weak. By strengthening those institutions, countries could avoid characteristic cycles of repeated violence. Today, significantly, the World Bank has a separate window for fragile states.

As Managing Director she also mobilized the international community to protect the world's poorest, first from the food price shocks of 2007, and then from the ensuing global financial crisis of 2008. More recently she has continued her robust advocacy for the poor as the African Union's and World Health Organization's Special Envoy for Finance during Covid-19.

When she was appointed Finance Minister of Nigeria, the country was suffering under a mountain of foreign debt. But relief seemed elusive because the conditions required by the IMF were politically unacceptable. With her team she successfully argued for Nigeria to propose its own, home-grown, reform program, and invited the IMF to monitor its progress. Creditors were reassured, and Nigeria was able to wipe off 18 billion dollars in debt.

In her second ministerial tour, as Coordinating Minister of the Economy, she took on Nigeria's hardest problem – corruption. So powerful was the impact of her intervention that one of the opposition groups kidnapped her own mother. She continued with her reform program nevertheless, while, inevitably, securing her mother's release.

You don't trouble Trouble Woman.

In 2021, when the World Trade Organization invited her to become its leader, conditions in the world at large had become dire. Globalization was slowing. Multilateralism, the guiding principle of globalization, was under threat. Both climate change and Covid-19, looming over the entire planet, required responses that could only be genuinely and energetically global. In just three years she has begun to restore global cooperation, starting with the crucial area of Covid vaccines, and moving on to critical issues in agriculture and fisheries. Her unflagging commitment to fair and equitable trade, supported by her unmatched negotiating skills, and the unique trust she enjoys among world leaders, have begun to enable the world to resume inclusive sustainable growth.

In every institution in which she has served, at every level in which she has served, Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala has been a formidable champion for the causes of women, the poor, and Africa. She has brought to these struggles not only a remarkable intellectual depth but also a depth of compassion for the disadvantaged, and a passion for justice. Her decades of service to her nation and to the world vividly embody two key Ignatian ideals, ideals that undergird everything we do at Georgetown. She has lived out the Magis, always striving to do more, always believing that individuals can and must do more. And in that striving, she has become an icon of the Ignatian mandate to live as a person for others.

Therefore, today, for her lifelong commitment to the redress of injustice and the rectification of asymmetry, and for the care and generosity with which she has exercised that commitment, Georgetown University is honored, and not a little awed, to confer upon Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala, the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

ANN MISIASZEK SARNOFF
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes a pioneering executive who embodies the unlimited potential for Hoyas to make an impact in the world.

In many ways, Ann Misiaszek Sarnoff's career has intersected with brands that have been pivotal to many of us. She has more than 30 years of experience in senior executive positions at some of the world's most recognized media companies, including Warner Bros., the BBC, Viacom, and Dow Jones. She most recently served as the first female chair and CEO of a major Hollywood film and television studio, and the first woman in the nearly 100-year history of Warner Bros. Entertainment to lead the organization, where she oversaw the production of film, television, digital, video games, and consumer products.

As a student at Georgetown, Sarnoff put her marketing mindset to work, launching the undergraduate marketing society and even helping the pizzeria where she worked part-time to create promotions that drew in more customers. Upon the advice of her father, she declined an offer to continue selling pizza and instead took a role at a boutique consulting firm in Virginia before enrolling in Harvard Business School for her MBA.

Sarnoff began her entertainment career at Viacom, where for over a decade she helped entities like TV Land and Noggin get off the ground and contributed to the development of Rugrats and Blue's Clues into multi-billion dollar retail franchises. During her time at Viacom, she served in numerous leadership roles, including Nickelodeon's Executive Vice President for Consumer Products and Business Development and Chief Operating Officer for VH1 and CMT.

She left Viacom to become the Chief Operating Officer for the WNBA, a role inspired by her athletic background and passion for elevating women's sports. Afterward, she became the President of Dow Jones Ventures and Senior Vice President of Strategy, where she launched new digital businesses and built the executive conference business for The Wall Street Journal.

She then began nine years at BBC, eventually serving as President of BBC Studios Americas. In that role, she grew the brand across the United States, Canada, and Latin America, and oversaw linear and digital program sales, co-productions, home entertainment, and licensing. She also led efforts to amplify BBC Studios' global brands, including Doctor Who, Top Gear, and the natural history brand BBC Earth. Additionally, Sarnoff was the co-founder and Board Chair of streaming service BritBox, which houses the largest collection of British television in the United States.

Throughout her successful career, Sarnoff has not forgotten her roots. In the forward of McDonough's book celebrating 60 years of women graduates at the school, she shared her personal story of growing up in a working-class family in a small town where all four of her grandparents had immigrated from Poland. Through her own ambition and the support of her parents, she applied to attend Georgetown University. In the book, she reflected on hearing the news of her acceptance to the university saying, "It's hard to overstate the significance of that acceptance letter. It opened up my world and my future."

Those roots have been important to Sarnoff as she continues to give back to her alma mater. Among the initiatives she supports at Georgetown is funding for scholarships for first-generation students, saying that kids who do not come from wealth, "should be able to go to a school as good as Georgetown and have it transform their lives the way it transformed mine."

So it is no surprise that Sarnoff has continued her connection with Georgetown University and the McDonough School of Business in the years since her graduation, serving on McDonough's Board of Advisors for 21 years, where she currently is the Vice Chair. She also has been a member of the Georgetown University Board of Directors. Her connection to the University deepened with the graduation of her son from Georgetown in the Class of 2017.

Sarnoff left WarnerMedia in 2022 and since has used her time to serve on corporate and nonprofit boards, including as a director of PayPal, Cineworld, and the Motion Picture & Television Fund, as well as WTA Ventures, which has the mission of growing the sport of women's tennis, and as vice chair of The Shed. She also is a founding board member of the NYULangone Empathy Project, whose mission is to teach empathy to healthcare providers.

In recognition of her pioneering spirit, her commitment to serving others, and her impact in the worlds of entertainment and marketing, Georgetown is proud to bestow upon Ann Sarnoff her second Georgetown degree, the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

TOYIN AJAYI
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes a purpose-driven trailblazer who is dedicated to reconceptualizing patients' health care experiences. Through her career achievements and as a health equity champion, Dr. Toyin Ajayi, has demonstrated dedication to social justice.

Dr. Ajayi is CEO and co-founder of Cityblock Health, the first value-based comprehensive health care provider and technology platform that serves low-income populations with Medicaid with complex physical and psychosocial needs. Cityblock's model of care meets individuals where they are, delivering highly personalized medical care, behavioral health care, and social services to members in neighborhoods where it's needed most.

With special emphasis on the most vulnerable and marginalized at the neighborhood level, Dr. Ajayi and the team at Cityblock Health are committed to breaking the cycle of patients being on the receiving end of stereotypes and biases. This promise requires humility as a core competency, as well as normalization of practices that value intersectionality and the unique lived experiences of each and every patient.

Dr. Ajayi also recognizes that health is mostly shaped by conditions outside of the medical establishment. By offering culturally and linguistically tailored psychosocial services, she has created a scalable model of care that meets the needs of the whole person - all for the sake of advancing health and well-being.

Prior to Cityblock Health, Dr. Ajayi served as chief medical officer of Commonwealth Care Alliance, a nationally-renowned integrated health plan, and care delivery system for individuals dually-eligible for Medicare and Medicaid. In this role, she led clinical operations, spearheaded care delivery innovations and oversaw multi-disciplinary teams of clinicians, community health workers and administrators serving more than 20,000 beneficiaries across the state of Massachusetts.

In addition to these roles, Dr. Ajayi has published in top medical journals and spoken on the national stage about her work in caring for populations with complex needs.

Dr. Ajayi received her undergraduate degree in human biology from Stanford University; a master of philosophy in development economic and international development from the University of Cambridge; and her medical degree, with distinction in clinical practice, from King's College London School of Medicine.

Dr. Ajayi completed her residency training at Boston Medical Center. She is a board-certified family medicine physician and continues to practice primary care and hospital medicine focused on patients with chronic, complex and end-of-life needs.

Guided by the Jesuit tradition of cura personalis, care of the whole person, Georgetown University School of Health reflects the ongoing, urgent need to focus our collective efforts on applied health research and on creating a more equitable, evidence-driven and values-based health care system that can withstand the enormous challenges facing our country. It is this interdisciplinary spirit of discovery that will best support the needed evolution in health and health care.

Dr. Ajayi's work aligns with the School of Health's vision for an equitable and just world where all people can achieve optimal health and well-being. Her approach reflects the aspirations of the School as we commit to reconceptualizing systems of care toward a biopsychosocial approach, integrating humility as a core competency, and fostering trust between the medical establishment and populations that have historically been disenfranchised. Dr. Ajayi's dedication to delivering services at the neighborhood level, ensuring that patients' identities and unique lived experiences are valued, embodies the philosophy and mission of the School of Health.

In recognition of her work in caring for underserved populations with complex needs, her longstanding commitment to achieving social justice in health care, and her successful role as a health equity champion, Georgetown University, with admiration and appreciation, bestows upon Toyin Ajayi, the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

IMANI PERRY
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes one of its own, an award-winning, innovative scholar whose powerful work, in the tradition of W.E.B. Du Bois, integrates legal, literary, sociological, cultural and historical research to expose vital truths: Dr. Imani Perry, Professor of Studies of Women, Gender and Sexuality and African and African American Studies at Harvard University.

Perry's academic career, from her bachelor's and doctoral degrees at Yale and Harvard, respectively, to her recent MacArthur Genius Fellowship, is a distinguished one. We are also immensely proud to have played a role in this scholar's journey. Upon completion of her doctoral studies, she came to Georgetown University Law Center as a Future Law Scholars Fellow, teaching literature and law, and earned an LL.M. in 2002. Subsequently she has served at several prestigious institutions, including Columbia, Rutgers and Princeton University.

Perry's research focuses on Black history, literature, culture and the arts, as well as social, political and legal realities of domination in the West. Her inaugural book, Prophets of the Hood: Politics and Poetics in Hip Hop, analyzes lyrics with cultural undertones by artists like Tupac and Ice Cube and likens them to the traditional call and response found within Black gospel music – marrying legal and pop culture themes to address the innovative art form. Similarly, her book May We Forever Stand: A History of the Black National Anthem, nominated for the 50th NAACP Image Award for Outstanding Literary Work, recognizes how the song “Lift Every Voice and Sing” traveled from South to North, organizing African Americans to celebrate the collective quest for freedom in the Civil Rights Movement. Perry invites readers into the lives of those at society's margins and encourages them to find meaning in others' stories to inform their own.

In addition to eight books, Perry's work includes numerous publications in scholarly and more popular fora, including The New York Times, Oxford American, Harpers and The Smithsonian Magazine. Perry is the editor for a posthumous collection of Black feminist Ntozake Shange's unpublished works, Sing A Black Girl's Song, and is a regular contributor for a column at The Atlantic.

Perry's 2018 biography on playwright Lorraine Hansberry was a New York Times Notable Book in the same year and won multiple awards, including the 2019 PEN/Jacqueline Bograd Weld Award for Biography and Lambda Literary Award for LGBTQ Nonfiction. Her 2022 book, South to America: A Journey Below the Mason-Dixon to Understand the Soul of a Nation, explores how the Black South offers crucial insight about the United States in general, and won the National Book Award for Nonfiction. In the judges' citation, they observed that Perry "breathes fresh air into examinations of long-held policies and current cultural practices nuanced by place and time. South to America is elegantly personal and archival, predictive and bold, sweet and soulful, and, most of all, true."

Perry's work has been recognized and supported through distinguished fellowships, most recently with a MacArthur Foundation Fellowship in 2023 and a Guggenheim Fellowship in 2021. The MacArthur Foundation said of South to America that Perry depicted as "both a geography and a psychology, a duality that resonates with her own bi-regional upbringing" in Birmingham, Alabama and Cambridge, Massachusetts. The book, in their words, "illuminates rich, dynamic, and often overlooked facets of historical and contemporary culture," and it gives "fresh context to history and the cultural expressions forged by Black Americans in the face of injustice."

As an alumna, scholar and teacher, Imani Perry shares with the Jesuit tradition a commitment to academic excellence and illuminating the lives of people whose voices have often been unheard. As she noted in her acceptance speech for the National Book Award, "I write because we children of the lash-scarred, rope-choked, bullet-ridden, desecrated are still here standing. [...] I write because I love sentences and I love freedom more. [...] I write for my children, [...] and for their entire generation who deserve so much better than what we've offered them. May they succeed where we have failed."

In recognition of her distinguished accomplishments as an interdisciplinary scholar and writer, the light she has shone on the human experience, and the truths she has revealed, Georgetown is privileged to bestow upon Imani Perry the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

PATRICIA POLGAR-BAILEY
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes Patricia Polgar-Bailey, a leader in our national nursing community. She is well-known for her sustaining contributions to advanced practice nursing education and also for her dedication to a life of service.

Patricia "Tish" Polgar-Bailey reflects the Jesuit spirit of docendo discimus: discere faciendo -- by teaching, we learn: learn by doing. She is one of the co-editors of the textbook "Primary care: Interprofessional Collaborative Practice," the sentinel book used for over 30 years in Advanced Practice Nursing programs across the nation. But Dr. Polgar-Bailey is not only recognized as an educator but as one who embodies the Jesuit spirit of an ethical and empathetic leader committed to lifelong learning, community engagement and a life of service.

Dr. Polgar-Bailey is a family nurse practitioner in the Charlottesville Free Clinic providing primary care and psychotherapy to members of our most vulnerable and underserved populations in the surrounding communities in Central Virginia. This free Clinic sees over 2600 patients annually, resulting in approximately 8,000 visits. She is fluent in Spanish which has allowed her to engage with the Latino populations who might otherwise not have access to care.

Like so many nurses, Dr. Polgar-Bailey began her education incrementally. She grew up in Western Europe, South America and Southeast Asia and as an undergraduate majored in economics and anthropology, in part to help better understand her observations and experiences in the world.

Since volunteering in a Vietnamese orphanage while in high school, which proved to be life-changing, Dr. Polgar-Bailey decided to become a nurse, which would provide a direct and tangible way to serve those most in need. Working as a family nurse practitioner with underserved and immigrant populations helped her appreciate the systemic issues that affect the health of individuals and populations. She returned to school to obtain her Master's Degree in Public Health in Epidemiology/Biostatistics and Environmental Health at Boston University School of Public Health.

Regardless of where she worked, Dr. Polgar-Bailey found that it was very difficult to find mental health resources for her patients, and untreated mental illness invariably affected a person's ability to manage their chronic medical problems.

In 2007, Dr. Polgar-Bailey returned to school again for a doctorate in clinical psychology in order to provide the full spectrum of health care so often needed, but rarely available for underserved and marginalized populations. In order to more adequately address people's spiritual needs, she completed a program in spiritual direction and is a graduate of the Living School at the Center of Action and Contemplation in New Mexico. She has been recognized for her research, teaching and commitment to social welfare. That commitment also extended to her involvement in foster care and adoption as well as food justice and equity. Dr. Polgar-Bailey's embodiment of Georgetown's cura personalis is evident in her lifetime of service.

In recognition of her ethical and empathetic leadership in the national nursing community, her commitment to lifelong learning, community engagement and a life of service, and her demonstration of cura personalis in acton Georgetown University with admiration and esteem bestows upon Patricia Polgar-Bailey, the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

NGOZI OKONJO-IWEALA
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Fortune has ranked today's honoree as one of the Fifty Greatest World Leaders. Forbes named her one of the Hundred Most Powerful Women in the World. Time considered her one of the Top Hundred Most Influential People in the World. The U.K. Guardian agreed. No wonder that in 2003, when she became Finance Minister of Nigeria, some people began to refer to her not by her name Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala, but as Ngozi Okonjo-Wahala, "trouble woman." They got that right. In her own words, she is "a fighter," serious trouble for anyone who accepts inequality, corruption or prejudice as the inevitable status quo. From the beginning of her long and distinguished career, in her native Nigeria and on the global stage, she has been unchanging only in her resolute opposition to any and all who resist change or deny its possibility.

After earning a bachelor's degree from Harvard Magna Cum Laude with a major in Economics, she went on to MIT where she received her doctorate. She then joined the World Bank where she rose rapidly through senior positions until finally becoming a Managing Director. When she joined the Bank it tended to shy away from countries in conflict, believing that aid would not be productive there. She argued instead that countries in conflict were in conflict largely because their institutions were weak. By strengthening those institutions, countries could avoid characteristic cycles of repeated violence. Today, significantly, the World Bank has a separate window for fragile states.

As Managing Director she also mobilized the international community to protect the world's poorest, first from the food price shocks of 2007, and then from the ensuing global financial crisis of 2008. More recently she has continued her robust advocacy for the poor as the African Union's and World Health Organization's Special Envoy for Finance during Covid-19.

When she was appointed Finance Minister of Nigeria, the country was suffering under a mountain of foreign debt. But relief seemed elusive because the conditions required by the IMF were politically unacceptable. With her team she successfully argued for Nigeria to propose its own, home-grown, reform program, and invited the IMF to monitor its progress. Creditors were reassured, and Nigeria was able to wipe off 18 billion dollars in debt.

In her second ministerial tour, as Coordinating Minister of the Economy, she took on Nigeria's hardest problem – corruption. So powerful was the impact of her intervention that one of the opposition groups kidnapped her own mother. She continued with her reform program nevertheless, while, inevitably, securing her mother's release.

You don't trouble Trouble Woman.

In 2021, when the World Trade Organization invited her to become its leader, conditions in the world at large had become dire. Globalization was slowing. Multilateralism, the guiding principle of globalization, was under threat. Both climate change and Covid-19, looming over the entire planet, required responses that could only be genuinely and energetically global. In just three years she has begun to restore global cooperation, starting with the crucial area of Covid vaccines, and moving on to critical issues in agriculture and fisheries. Her unflagging commitment to fair and equitable trade, supported by her unmatched negotiating skills, and the unique trust she enjoys among world leaders, have begun to enable the world to resume inclusive sustainable growth.

In every institution in which she has served, at every level in which she has served, Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala has been a formidable champion for the causes of women, the poor, and Africa. She has brought to these struggles not only a remarkable intellectual depth but also a depth of compassion for the disadvantaged, and a passion for justice. Her decades of service to her nation and to the world vividly embody two key Ignatian ideals, ideals that undergird everything we do at Georgetown. She has lived out the Magis, always striving to do more, always believing that individuals can and must do more. And in that striving, she has become an icon of the Ignatian mandate to live as a person for others.

Therefore, today, for her lifelong commitment to the redress of injustice and the rectification of asymmetry, and for the care and generosity with which she has exercised that commitment, Georgetown University is honored, and not a little awed, to confer upon Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala, the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

Today, Georgetown University recognizes a change-maker: a leader who ties together the management and operations of both public and private sector organizations and who is equally at home building global businesses as reforming government, driving for a better future for his country, region and indeed the world.

His Excellency Mohammad Al Gergawi has served as the Minister of Cabinet Affairs of the United Arab Emirates government since 2006, leveraging a private-sector approach to innovation and agility to inform the reform of the UAE's progressive, future-focused governance model.

Al Gergawi currently oversees the development and implementation of the Emirates' federal government strategy, aligning efforts to achieve the objectives of the UAE National Agenda to focus on effective and efficient governance in service of the people.

He also served as the Deputy Chairman of both the Ministerial Development Council and the Emirates Investment Authority. Between 2016 and 2020, future foresight was added to his portfolio, and he developed the UAE Future Foresight Strategy to promote the government's readiness for long-term success. "We live in a different era in which companies have evolved faster than governments. Today's companies are very future-oriented," he said in an interview with the World Economic Forum. "Government leaders and policymakers must think of themselves as designers of the future... It's not possible to solve today's problems with a short-term view."

His career has spanned leadership roles across both the public and the private sectors, as well as in the management of large-scale philanthropic initiatives. In addition to his ministerial duties, Al Gergawi chairs the Executive Office in Dubai, the World Government Summit, and the Dubai Future Foundation. He also chairs the Mohammed bin Rashid Global Initiatives, through which he manages the operations of more than 30 charitable and philanthropic initiatives around the world focused on human development across sectors, such as humanitarian aid and relief, healthcare, education, and empowering communities. This foundation benefitted over 100 million people in need in the past year alone. Additionally, His Excellency recently supervised the 1 Billion Meal initiative, which aims to provide a food safety net for the world's most underprivileged populations around the world, and his work with Noor Dubai aims to eliminate all forms of preventable blindness globally.

Al Gergawi also is a member of the World Economic Forum's Leadership Council and co-chairman of the Global Future Councils launched in collaboration with the World Economic Forum. In 2018, he was chosen as a member of the United Nations Secretary-General's High-Level Panel on Digital Cooperation, which helps governments address the challenges of rapid technological advancements.

Central to his work has been the desire to create a better future for the UAE and our shared society. At the heart of his administration's approach to leadership is a focus on how decisions will impact others, now and for generations to come. Aligned with Georgetown's Jesuit tradition, Al Gergawi seeks to advance the society, communities and peoples of the UAE while exemplifying humanist ideals and serving the common good.

Within academia, Al Gergawi has served as a member of several higher education institutions, including the Board of Directors of the UAE University and the Board of Trustees of Abu Dhabi University. In addition, he is the Founding President of the Mohammed bin Rashid School of Government; a member of the International Advisory Board of the American University of Beirut; and an Honorary Fellow of London Business School. In the field of social work, he has supervised numerous social initiatives such as establishing the Dubai Autism Center and the UAE Disabled Sports Federation.

Minister Al Gergawi also has supported the UAE's advancement through a commitment to talent development, providing new educational opportunities to a range of citizens, from youth to the country's top executives. He has been pivotal in the establishment of our own Georgetown Executive MBA in Dubai, elevating Georgetown McDonough's impact at the intersection of business and global affairs and providing opportunities for business and government leaders to contribute toward their long-term strategic vision as they lead the way for a better world.

In recognition of his career of public service, marked by investments in education and innovation in human development to elevate both his own nation and the wider world, his efforts to advance his country's evolution and growth while also seeking the common good of all of mankind, and his work to deliver on a long-term strategic vision that will lead the way to a better world, Georgetown University is privileged to bestow upon His Excellency Mohammad Al Gergawi the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

TODD PARK
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

Today Georgetown University recognizes a man who has worked across the public, private, and social sectors to improve access to essential high-quality services. Known as an “impatient change maker”, Todd Park has spent the last twenty-five years improving how healthcare works.

In 1997, a few years after Park graduated magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa from Harvard College with a bachelor’s degree in economics, he co-founded Athenahealth. It was one of the earliest companies to develop and deploy internet-based software to manage healthcare, including moving from paper to electronic claims. Streamlining health care management was not only important for patients, it was also entrepreneurial - within ten years, Athenahealth went public with a market cap of over $1 billion.

In 2008, after co-founding and building three different healthcare companies, Todd Park was preparing to give up working the long hours start-ups demand to start a family. He was ready to retire at the age of 35 to spend quality time at home. But an early retirement was not in his future. Mr. Park was being called to serve. No, his childhood dream of being a fighter pilot in the Navy was not coming to fruition. Instead, he was asked to join the Obama administration as the first Chief Technology Officer for the Department of Health and Human Services. In an interview with former Senator Bill Frist, Park said that given the success of AthenaHealth, it was illogical to leave it, but he decided that he loved his country too much to ignore the request. As he reminded us in that same interview, service is rarely about logic - it is usually about doing something meaningful for others. A commitment that resonates with so many of our students graduating today.

This transition from industry entrepreneur to government leader ended up being a natural one. In addition to launching healthcare.gov only 3 months after the passage of the Affordable Care Act, Park imagined new ways to use and make the data collected by HHS accessible to those inside and outside of government, propelling a new generation of health entrepreneurs. According to a New York Times article, Mr. Park liberated health care data from government vaults.

In 2011, Park was recognized by Forbes as one of the ten most powerful data scientists. Park said in a Business Week article, “It is possible to be entrepreneurial in the U.S. government. It’s possible for government to execute major projects at Silicon Valley speed.”

Years later when he would reflect on his time in government, he would say that those seven years were “the most extraordinary and intense and incredible - I was brought in to be a change agent.” And that public service “sets the bar for what meaningful work really is”. Park’s journey in government serves as a model for the next generation of changemakers graduating today.

All of his experiences in the private and public sectors with healthcare led him to co-found one more company six years ago - Devoted Health. Devoted Health provides seniors with personalized and coordinated care. It embodies a shift in Park’s vision from improving healthcare to improving healthcare and well-being by giving people access to a “tech enabled guardian angel”.

Through his work in the public and private sector, this impatient change maker has served as a quiet hero who has spent his life improving the health care system and developing innovative technologies to improve the quality of living for ordinary people. For his care for the whole person in the spirit of St. Ignatius, for his technological innovations for the improvement of health care for all, and for his commitment to service, Georgetown University with respect and appreciation confers upon Todd Park the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters Honoris Causa.

TOYIN AJAYI
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes a purpose-driven trailblazer who is dedicated to reconceptualizing patients' health care experiences. Through her career achievements and as a health equity champion, Dr. Toyin Ajayi, has demonstrated dedication to social justice.

Dr. Ajayi is CEO and co-founder of Cityblock Health, the first value-based comprehensive health care provider and technology platform that serves low-income populations with Medicaid with complex physical and psychosocial needs. Cityblock's model of care meets individuals where they are, delivering highly personalized medical care, behavioral health care, and social services to members in neighborhoods where it's needed most.

With special emphasis on the most vulnerable and marginalized at the neighborhood level, Dr. Ajayi and the team at Cityblock Health are committed to breaking the cycle of patients being on the receiving end of stereotypes and biases. This promise requires humility as a core competency, as well as normalization of practices that value intersectionality and the unique lived experiences of each and every patient.

Dr. Ajayi also recognizes that health is mostly shaped by conditions outside of the medical establishment. By offering culturally and linguistically tailored psychosocial services, she has created a scalable model of care that meets the needs of the whole person - all for the sake of advancing health and well-being.

Prior to Cityblock Health, Dr. Ajayi served as chief medical officer of Commonwealth Care Alliance, a nationally-renowned integrated health plan, and care delivery system for individuals dually-eligible for Medicare and Medicaid. In this role, she led clinical operations, spearheaded care delivery innovations and oversaw multi-disciplinary teams of clinicians, community health workers and administrators serving more than 20,000 beneficiaries across the state of Massachusetts.

In addition to these roles, Dr. Ajayi has published in top medical journals and spoken on the national stage about her work in caring for populations with complex needs.

Dr. Ajayi received her undergraduate degree in human biology from Stanford University; a master of philosophy in development economic and international development from the University of Cambridge; and her medical degree, with distinction in clinical practice, from King's College London School of Medicine.

Dr. Ajayi completed her residency training at Boston Medical Center. She is a board-certified family medicine physician and continues to practice primary care and hospital medicine focused on patients with chronic, complex and end-of-life needs.

Guided by the Jesuit tradition of cura personalis, care of the whole person, Georgetown University School of Health reflects the ongoing, urgent need to focus our collective efforts on applied health research and on creating a more equitable, evidence-driven and values-based health care system that can withstand the enormous challenges facing our country. It is this interdisciplinary spirit of discovery that will best support the needed evolution in health and health care.

Dr. Ajayi's work aligns with the School of Health's vision for an equitable and just world where all people can achieve optimal health and well-being. Her approach reflects the aspirations of the School as we commit to reconceptualizing systems of care toward a biopsychosocial approach, integrating humility as a core competency, and fostering trust between the medical establishment and populations that have historically been disenfranchised. Dr. Ajayi's dedication to delivering services at the neighborhood level, ensuring that patients' identities and unique lived experiences are valued, embodies the philosophy and mission of the School of Health.

In recognition of her work in caring for underserved populations with complex needs, her longstanding commitment to achieving social justice in health care, and her successful role as a health equity champion, Georgetown University, with admiration and appreciation, bestows upon Toyin Ajayi, the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

The Oath of Hippocrates

I, (PRONOUNCE NAME), solemnly promise to God Almighty that according to my ability and judgment I will endeavor at all times to observe the stipulations of this oath which, through ageless tradition, has governed the conduct of my predecessors in the profession which I am about to enter.

Appreciating the benefits of the instruction accorded to me, I promise to esteem and revere the teachers who have trained me in the science and art of medicine, to share my good fortune with them and to relieve their necessities should want befall them. To all who are deserving, but to none who are unworthy, I will freely impart a knowledge of my science and art.

I will adhere to the doctrine and prescribe the treatment which my ability and judgment assure me are most beneficial for my patients. I will abstain from everything which may be harmful or dangerous to them. I will attempt no treatment which evidently requires training and skill superior to mine.

With purity of purpose and holiness of life, I will practice my profession. My every word and deed in the homes of my patients or in other places of treatment will be directed solely to the welfare of these patients. With the help of God's grace they will find no occasion in my speech and actions to disrespect my profession. Whatever I see or hear as I practice my profession which should not be revealed, I will not divulge because such knowledge must remain secret.

As long as I keep this promise, I hope to enjoy happiness in life, success in my profession, and the respect of my fellow men and women. But may the reverse be my lot if I should willfully violate my solemn word now given before God.

SANJAY GUPTA
DOCTOR OF SCIENCE, HONORIS CAUSA

Today, Georgetown University recognizes an exemplar in the fields of medicine, medical journalism, and public service. Multiple Emmy®-award winning chief medical correspondent for CNN Dr. Sanjay Gupta, a practicing neurosurgeon, has played an integral role in CNN's domestic and international reporting on health and medical news. Dr. Gupta's objective reporting on challenging issues is of great service to his patients, to public health, and to global health and sets a precedent for those in the field of medical and science journalism. In addition, his dedication to exploring the many ways to care for the emotional and physical well-being of people represents a commitment to care for the whole person that aligns with our core values as physicians.

Dr. Gupta received his undergraduate degree from the University of Michigan and his Doctorate of Medicine from the University of Michigan Medical School. He stayed at his alma mater to complete his residency in neurological surgery and went on to a fellowship year at Semmes Murphey Clinic in Memphis, Tennessee.

Dr. Gupta joined CNN in 2001, where he gained early recognition for his reporting on the 9/11 terror attacks in New York City and the anthrax attacks. In 2003, as the embedded medical correspondent with the US Navy's "Devil Docs" medical unit, he provided live coverage of the first battlefield operation performed during the Iraq war and performed five life-saving brain surgeries in a desert operating room. Since then, he has covered some of the most important health stories in the U.S. and around the world, including both natural and man-made disasters, the rollout of the Affordable Care Act, mental health, Ebola, medical marijuana, the Flint water crisis, the opioid crisis, and the COVID-19 pandemic.

Dr. Gupta's live, on-air commentary was paramount to CNN's broadcast coverage of the COVID-19 pandemic. On March 9, 2020, he penned an op-ed announcing the network would refer to the novel coronavirus outbreak as a "pandemic," ahead of both the WHO and the CDC. From the beginning and through the height of the COVID-19 pandemic, Gupta reaffirmed his role as a trusted guide to viewers worldwide on navigating between facts and fiction surrounding COVID-19.

In addition to his journalism work for CNN, Dr. Gupta is an associate professor of neurosurgery at Emory University Hospital and associate chief of neurosurgery at Grady Memorial Hospital in Atlanta. He also serves as a diplomate of the American Board of Neurosurgery, and in 2019, Dr. Gupta was elected to the National Academy of Medicine, one of the highest honors a doctor may receive in the medical field.

In the words of Dr. Sanjay Gupta during the COVID-19 pandemic, "Misinformation... has become as big of an epidemic as the virus itself." In a world where misinformation can spread like wildfire, the pursuit of medical truth becomes an act of defiance. Today, we honor a man whose life's work has been defined by that very defiance—a defiance that has illuminated the path forward in our collective journey towards a healthier, more informed society.

In recognition of his unparalleled contributions to the field of medical and science journalism, his steadfast commitment to the pursuit of truth, and his unwavering dedication to public service through journalism, Georgetown University is privileged to bestow upon Sanjay Gupta the degree of Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa.

PHILIP J. HIRSCHKOP
DOCTOR OF LAWS, HONORIS CAUSA

More than 50 years ago, Philip J. Hirschkop, L'64, served as co-counsel on the case that abolished the last state laws in the country banning interracial marriage.

The case, Loving v. Virginia, led to the 1967 U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing interracial marriages in Virginia and 15 other holdout states.

The Loving case was just one of many significant cases in Hirschkop's lengthy career. He went on to argue two additional cases before the U.S. Supreme Court in the 1970s. He built a national reputation for fighting for anti-Vietnam War and civil rights demonstrators, played a large role in the federal court litigation that resulted in women being admitted to the University of Virginia and other state colleges, and protected animal rights through his work with People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

In the beginning, this New York native did not seem headed towards social justice work. Upon graduating from high school, Hirschkop joined the Army in 1954, completed Special Forces training, and became a Green Beret. In the early 1960s, he earned a B.A. in liberal arts and a M.S. in mechanical engineering from Columbia University.

An evening student at Georgetown Law, he used his mechanical engineering degree to work a reliable "day job" as an examiner in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

In 1963, Hirschkop spent time in Danville, Va., where police had sprayed civil rights protesters to the ground with fire hoses and beat them with batons. He returned to Georgetown Law knowing what he wanted to do. Hirschkop co-founded the Law Students Civil Rights Research Council, which supported law students and paralegals who volunteered for civil rights organizations. He supervised about 100 law students in Mississippi during the Freedom Summer of 1964. From the moment he graduated from Georgetown Law in 1964, he began to practice law, having taken the Virginia Bar Exam before graduation.

As a volunteer attorney for the ACLU, Hirschkop began to represent Richard and Mildred Loving in July of 1964. He defended the couple in state and federal courts, helping to ensure their physical safety and keep them out of jail. He crafted a communications strategy to tell their story to the world and orchestrated an exclusive with Life Magazine. By 1967, he argued the Lovings' case before the U.S. Supreme Court. Hirschkop's co-counsel was fellow Virginian Bernard S. Cohen, L'61, who had also recently completed law school at Georgetown. In their brief, they surveyed Virginia's long history of dictating to individuals whom they could love and marry. They emphasized that anti-miscegenation laws were "a relic of slavery" and "an expression of modern day racism." The Court embraced their logic and the Loving case, along with Brown v. Board of Education, became a beacon for freedom and equality under the Fourteenth Amendment.

As he was representing the Lovings, Hirschkop also filed a suit in federal court on behalf of a Black teacher fired for attending a civil rights demonstration. In 1965, he defended anti-war protestors arrested during a demonstration at the Pentagon. For the next five plus decades of his career, Hirschkop would continue to advocate for social justice, defending the rights of women, teachers, veterans, war demonstrators, and animals. He served on the ACLU's National Board of Directors and as Chair of the ACLU of Virginia, which he helped found in 1969. He worked on prison reform and women's and teachers' rights, including arguing a 1974 case, Cohen v. Chesterfield County, before the U.S. Supreme Court, which outlawed discriminatory practices against pregnant teachers. He also had an active private practice.

Throughout his career, Hirschkop chose to represent clients based on his principles, no matter the risk to his career or livelihood, though eventually, because he was an excellent lawyer, even the wealthy and powerful would turn to him when their liberty was at risk. Among the notable people he represented throughout his inspiring career are civil rights firebrand H. Rap Brown, comedian and activist Dick Gregory, homeless advocate Mitch Snyder, members of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and writer Norman Mailer. For his decades of litigating for the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), the organization honored him by naming its legal department after him in 2016.

The award of this Honorary Doctorate of Laws (honoris causa) is a fitting tribute to the extraordinary contributions that Mr. Hirschkop has made as an American civil rights lawyer. In recognition of his achievements, Georgetown University is privileged to bestow upon Philip J. Hirschkop the degree of Doctor of Laws, Honoris Causa.

JEROME POWELL
DOCTOR OF LAWS, HONORIS CAUSA

When Jerome H. Powell speaks, the markets listen – and move. As the chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve System, he is the most powerful economic voice in our nation, with more influence over the U.S. dollar's value than any other person.

The Fed chair plays three major roles: setting monetary policy, overseeing bank regulation, and being the public face of the institution. Today, Georgetown Law recognizes an exceptional attorney, investment banker, and businessman who has built a reputation for bipartisan consensus building among his colleagues across the Federal Reserve System. He's known for his research and for prioritizing data. "In my experience, the best outcomes are reached when opposing viewpoints are clearly and strongly presented before decisions are made," Powell said in 2012.

Powell was born in Washington, D.C., and was the son of a lawyer. He received a bachelor's degree in politics from Princeton University in 1975, and earned his Juris Doctor from Georgetown University Law Center in 1979. While at Georgetown Law, he was editor-in-chief of the Georgetown Law Journal. After law school, he clerked on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

After practicing law for a few years, in 1984 he embarked on a career in investment banking, starting at Dillon, Read and Company in New York.

In 1990, during President George H.W. Bush's term, he moved back to Washington to become the Treasury Department's assistant secretary and under secretary for domestic finance. There, he was responsible for policy on financial institutions, the Treasury debt market, and other related policy issues.

Before his appointment to the Board of Governors, from 1997 through 2005, Powell was a partner at The Carlyle Group, the asset management firm.

Throughout his career, Mr. Powell has shown a willingness to reach across the aisle to seek solutions to problems. In 2005, he traded his high-finance job at Carlyle to focus on public policy as a scholar at the Bipartisan Policy Center, a Washington-based research organization.

He later worked behind the scenes to persuade congressional Republicans to raise the debt ceiling — an initiative that got the attention of the Obama administration, leading to his initial nomination to the Fed.

In late 2011, President Barack Obama nominated him to fill an unexpired term on the Fed's Board of Governors, and the Senate confirmed him the following May. Two years later, he was renominated and sworn to a full term.

Powell took office as Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve in February 2018 for a four-year term. He was reappointed to that office and sworn in for a second four-year term in May of 2022.

Powell also serves as Chair of the Federal Open Market Committee, the system's principal monetary policy-making body.

In addition to his service on corporate boards, Powell has made a great contribution serving on the boards of charitable and educational institutions, including the Bendheim Center for Finance at Princeton University and the Nature Conservancy of Washington, D.C., and Maryland.

The Federal Reserve System seeks to promote the effective operation of the U.S. economy and, more generally, the public interest. Powell's service in this role embodies this public service mission.

In 2020, Powell addressed events related to racial injustice and offered comments on behalf of his colleagues across the Federal Reserve System. He said, "The Federal Reserve serves the entire nation. We operate in, and are part of, many of the communities across the country where Americans are grappling with and expressing themselves on issues of racial equality... There is no place at the Federal Reserve for racism and there should be no place for it in our society. Everyone deserves the opportunity to participate fully in our society and in our economy. These principles guide us in all we do, from monetary policy, to our focus on diversity and inclusion in our workplace, and to our work to ensure fair access to credit across the country. We will take this opportunity to renew our steadfast commitment to these principles."

The award of this Honorary Doctorate of Laws (honoris causa) is a fitting recognition for the extraordinary contributions that Jerome Powell has made as an attorney and businessman, supervising and regulating bank operations and establishing U.S. monetary policies that steer America's economy. In recognition of his achievements, Georgetown University is privileged to bestow upon Jerome Powell the degree of Doctor of Laws, Honoris Causa.

NORAH O'DONNELL
DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS, HONORIS CAUSA

For more than 200 years, generations of Georgetown graduates have been charged to “Go forth and set the world aflame.” These powerful words from St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Jesuit Order, urge graduates to leverage their knowledge, talents, and skills to serve the greater good. Today, Georgetown University is proud to honor one of our own, whose life and work have met the call to set the world aflame: Ms. Norah O’Donnell.

Ms. O’Donnell is a multiple Emmy Award-winning journalist with nearly three decades of experience covering news across the globe. She is the managing editor and anchor of the CBS Evening News, anchor of CBS News Election Specials, and a 60 Minutes contributing correspondent. She is currently covering her seventh presidential election and has interviewed some of the world’s most important leaders, including every living president of the United States. Just this past month, she spoke with Pope Francis in a historic interview in Rome. Prior to CBS News, she worked for more than a decade at NBC News.

A supercut of her career offers a veritable who’s who of global leaders and influential figures. Since joining CBS News, she has interviewed President Joe Biden, and former Presidents Donald Trump and Barack Obama, Vice President Mike Pence, and Speaker Nancy Pelosi. She has engaged with leading figures, including Nobel Peace Prize winner Malala Yousafzai, His Royal Highness Prince Harry of Wales, and the Dalai Lama.

Some of the stories that have most impacted Ms. O’Donnell are the everyday people she met while reporting in the field. She has traveled to the devastating wildfires in Maui; the wars in Ukraine and the Middle East; Hurricanes Dorian and Harvey; mass shootings in Las Vegas and El Paso, TX; the country’s largest migrant processing facility on the southern border; and the Boston Marathon bombing. She has covered countless breaking news stories, including reporting live from the Pentagon on September 11, 2001, and traveling with then-Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld on his first trip to Afghanistan.

In a fractured and contentious media landscape, she has the rare capacity to listen closely—demonstrating a profound empathy for others’ lived experiences. Furthermore, she is unafraid to speak truth to power. Born into a military family, she has called attention to the heavy toll that America’s wars have taken on U.S. armed services and veterans. Ms. O'Donnell brings forward the humanity behind every headline—reminding us of the heart of America in times of both hardship and celebration time and time again.

It is no surprise she has won a groundbreaking number of awards. She won her first Emmy in 2009 as part of NBC News' 2008 Election Night coverage team. An advocate for women's empowerment, she led a six-month long investigation into sexual assaults within the U.S. Air Force Academy in 2018, for which she was awarded her second Emmy. O'Donnell was also awarded a prestigious 2022 duPont-Columbia Award and the Scripps Howard Award for Excellence in Broadcast National and International Coverage for an exclusive, year-and-a-half long investigation into sexual assault in the U.S. military overall. Other awards have included the Edward R. Murrow Award for "Best Newscast" recognizing her on-the-ground coverage from the U.S.-Mexico border in 2020; a Gracie Award for Best National News On-Air Talent in both 2018 and 2016; and a Merriman Smith Memorial Award for excellence in presidential news coverage in 2016.

Ms. O'Donnell is a double Hoya. She earned both a Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy and Master of Arts in Liberal Studies from Georgetown. This is where she met her now husband, Geoff Tracy, a D.C. restaurateur. She is a proud mom to three children.

Whether interviewing heads of state or everyday citizens, she brings a curious, engaged, and global perspective to her reporting. Relentless in her pursuit of the truth, she gives voice to the voiceless, and she serves the needs of society through reflection, action, and ebullient passion.

In recognition of her indelible contributions to journalism and the public sphere, Georgetown University is proud to bestow upon Norah O'Donnell the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa.

Alma Mater

Tune: Men of Harlech

Words: Robert Collier, COL 1894

Arranged by Dr. José Antonio Bowen, 2001

The musical score is written for a single voice part in 4/4 time, using a treble clef and a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The melody is simple and memorable, with a mix of quarter, eighth, and half notes. The lyrics are printed below the staff, with hyphens indicating syllables that span across notes. The piece concludes with a final double bar line.

Hail, O George-town, Al - ma Ma - ter, Swift Po - to - mac's love - ly daugh - ter, ev - er watch - ing by the wa - ter, smiles on us to - day.
Now her child - ren gath - er round her, lo! with gar - lands they have crown'd her, rev' - rent hands and fond en - wound her with the Blue and Gray.
Wave her Col - ors ev - er, furl her stan - dard nev - er, but raise it high, and proud - ly cry, May George - town live for - ev - er. Where Po - to - mac's tide is stream - ing, from her spires and stee - ples beam - ing, see the grand old ban - ner gleam - ing, Georgetown's Blue and Gray.
